MYSTERIOUS NEW STAR APPEARS OVER HOLY LAND

My Christmas Miracle

How an umbrella turned a bleak holiday into the best ever!

"We are never alone. Not even the night is darkest, the wind coldest . . ." That's the lesson Taylor Caldwell learned one bleak Christmas Day many years ago, when she was out of a job and out of hope, without even enough money to buy her little girl a present. In this special Weekly World News installment from the inspirational book, The Guideposts Treasury of Hope, the famed author of Captains & the Kings recalls the miracle that transformed a dreary Christmas into the most memorable day of her life.

TAYLOR CALDWELL, author of Captains & the Kings, and other best sellers.

By TAYLOR CALDWELL / Special to Weekly World News

For many of us, one Christmas stands out from all the others — the one when the meaning of the day shone clearest.

My own "truest" Christmas began on a rainy spring day in the 1930s in the bleakest year of my life. Recently divorced, I was in my 20s, had no job, and was on my way downtown to go the rounds of the employment offices.

I sat down in the streetcar and there against the seat was a beautiful silk umbrella with a silver handle inlaid with gold and flecks of bright enamel. I had never seen anything so lovely. I examined the handle and saw a name engraved among the golden scrolls.

I decided to take it with me and find the owner myself.

I searched a telephone book for the name on the umbrella and found it. I called and a lady answered.

Yes, she said in surprise, that was her umbrella, which her parents, now dead, had given her for a birthday present. But she added, it had been stolen more than a year ago from her locker at the school where she taught.

She was so excited that I forgot I was looking for a job and went directly to her stately house. She took the umbrella and her eyes filled with tears.

She wished to give me a reward, but — though $20 was all I had in the world — her happiness at retrieving this special possession was such that to have accepted money would have spoiled something. We talked for a while, and I must have given her my address. I don't remember.

The next six months were stretched. I was able to obtain only temporary employment here and there. But I put aside 25 or 50 cents when I could afford it for Christmas presents for my little girl Peggy. My last job ended the day before Christmas, my $30 rent was soon due, and I had $13 in my purse.

On Christmas Eve, bells rang, children shouted, windows were lighted and everyone was laughing. But there would be no Christmas for me, I knew.

As I struggled through the snowdrifts, I just almost reached the lowest point in my life. Unless a miracle happened, I'd be weeks, and there had been no answer but this coldness and darkness. God and man had completely forgotten me. I felt old as death and as lonely. What was to become of me?

I looked in my mailbox. There were only bills in it and two white envelopes which I was sure contained notices that my services were no longer required.

CHRISTMAS scene from the 1920s.

and I cried, shivering in my thin coat. But I made myself smile so I could greet my little daughter with a pretense of happiness. She opened the door for me and threw herself in my arms, screaming joyously and demanding that we decorate the tree immediately.

I felt brokenhearted. We would have only hamburgers for dinner, and I had promised her a turkey. I had no money for presents. I had no job. I had no prospects.

I dreaded the existence of God and His mercy — and the coldness in my heart was colder than ice.

The doorbell rang and Peggy ran gaily to answer it, calling that it must be Santa Claus. He was a delivery man, and his arms were full of big parcels.

Peggy and I sat on the floor and opened them. A huge doll. Gloves. Candy. A beautiful leather purse. Incredible! I looked for the name of the sender.

It was the teacher, the address simply "California," where she had moved.

Our dinner that night was the most delicious I had ever eaten. I could only peep in myself. "Thank You, Father." I forgot I had no money for the rent, only $13 and no job. We ate and laughed together.

Then we decorated the little tree. I put Peggy to bed and set up her gifts around the tree, and a sweet peace flooded me like a benediction.

Then I opened the two white envelopes. One was a notice that I had worked for briefly in the summer.

It was, said a note, my "Christmas bonus." My rent!

The other envelope was an offer of a permanent position with the government — to begin two days after Christmas.

I sat with the letter in my hand and the check on the table, and I think that was the most joyful moment of my life up to that time.

The church bells began to ring. I looked at my child, who was sleeping blissfully, and ran down to the street. People smiled at me and I smiled back. Someone began to sing, O Come, All Ye Faithful. I joined in and sang with them.

"I am not alone," I thought. "I was never alone at all."

SURGEON LEAVES PATIENT'S BRAIN EXPOSED – & GOES TO LUNCH!

HUNGRY DOC: Raymond Sattler disappeared from the operating room to feed his face during delicate brain surgery

WILMINGTON, N.C. — A doctor's license has been suspended after an investigation revealed he left a patient's brain exposed for 25 minutes — while he went to lunch.

And that's not the half of it, according to the North Carolina State Medical Board, who says neurosurgeon Dr. Raymond Sattler also:

- Forgot the names of surgical equipment during an operation.
- Told a nurse to drill holes in a patient's head and work on the outer brain even though she wasn't trained to do so.
- Ordered intravenous fluids to be given to himself during a procedure because he thought he was going to pass out.

25-minute break gets sawbones in hot water!

The surgery being performed on the patient was intended to treat an aneurysm in which a blood vessel's wall had weakened and ballooned inside the brain, threatening to burst.

After more than three hours of surgery, Dr. Sattler clipped the aneurysm, which means he shut off blood flow to that area. Hospital records show that 28 minutes later he left the operating room for 25 minutes.

A surgeon leaving while a patient's head is open with a clipped aneurysm is considered unusual, say surgeons and surgical nurses.

Dr. Sattler would not comment on the specific accusations but said he would appeal the suspension at a January hearing before the board.

"I will lay it all out for you in a way everyone can understand," Dr. Sattler told the Wilmington Star-News.

Dr. Victor Kerssen, a former partner of Dr. Sattler's in Fayetteville, said he never knew about Dr. Sattler leaving an operation or heard about him doing so.

"He was a good and capable surgeon here," Dr. Kerssen added.

After an aneurysm is clipped during a long surgical procedure, it would be reasonable to take a break, Dr. Kerssen explained.

But if a surgeon left under those conditions, he would be just outside the operating room where anyone could find him, he added.

"To disappear without explanation would be hard to understand," Dr. Kerssen remarked.

A nurse who asked not to be identified said: "What do you call when the surgeon has disappeared from the room and you don't know where he is?" she asked. "Not just anyone can close a head."

Family moo-ves out after cow crashes through roof!

YAOUNDE, Cameroon — Convinced they were victims of black magic, a badly frightened family "moo-ved" out of their house — when a live cow crashed through the roof.

"It was midnight. I was in the living room watching a film — Dances With Wolves — when I heard a terrible noise. I thought the house was going to collapse," said Marguerite Nomu, 23.

The cow was able to climb onto the roof because the house is built on land cut into a slope.

The terrified family moved out immediately convinced someone had cast an evil spell on them.

YOU BE THE JUDGE

IT'S A DISGRACE ☐
Dr. Raymond Sattler was irresponsible for leaving a patient's head so long. He should be stripped of his license and banned from every hospital in America. He wouldn't have taken a 25-minute lunch break if the patient was about to pay for it.

IT'S PERFECTLY FINE ☐
Surgeons have a right to lunch just like anyone else. Dr. Sattler is only human. Besides, no harm was done. The patient survived, so what's all the stink about?

Cops say he's a 'Natural Born Killer'

By JACK ALEXANDER

TEEN GUNS DOWN HIS MOTHER & SISTER — TO BE JUST LIKE MOVIE BAD GUY!

An accused murderer copied Woody Harrelson in the movie, Natural Born Killers, when he gunned down two members of his own family, cops say.

Nathan Martinez, 17, was so obsessed with the movie he shaved his head and wore tinted granny glasses just like the homicidal killer played by Harrelson, police said.

Friends said Martinez often talked about killing his family, so he was the top suspect when his stepmother, Lauren Martinez, 42, and his half sister, Alexis, 10, were slain as they slept.

After the brutal killings in Bluffdale, Utah, Martinez vowed to shoot it out rather than surrender to confront-ation by police. But he didn't even reach for his gun when police captured him in a motel in O'Neill, Neb.

"He said he wouldn't go down without a fight and all that macho stuff," said Sheriff's Detective Darren Carr.

"But he changed his mind when he saw all those guys in his room."

Feared friend Bryan Humblen, who rode with Martinez from Utah to Pocatello, Idaho, after the slayings, said they used money from the dead stepmother's bank account to buy the Natural Born Killers soundtrack.

"At one point I asked him, 'Nathan, you wouldn't kill me, would you?'" Humblen said. "He put his hand on my knee, squeezed it and replied, 'I don't know. I don't know.'"

Martinez waived extradition, which means he will not fight his return to Utah to face trial.

BLOOD-DRENCHED movie, Natural Born Killers, stars Juliette Lewis and Woody Harrelson.

PSST! Gossiping is good for your marriage!

By ANTHONY DENTON
Correspondent

Looking for an easy, enjoyable way to improve your marriage? Just start gossiping!

That's the latest advice of a university expert who says that sharing gossip with your mate about what others are doing and saying can actually strengthen your own relationship. Here's how gossip helps, according to Dr. Marc Lipton, a nationally known expert on human behavior.

● Gossip makes it easier for you to handle your own family matters — because you learn from other people's mistakes.

When you discuss how another couple coped with a job loss, a rebellious teenager or other serious problem, it gives you insight into what they did right or wrong — and that makes it easier for you to handle a similar problem.

● Gossip can be a useful way to voice your opinions on touchy subjects.

If your husband is tired of hearing about his poor health habits such as smoking and overeating, for example, you can still get across your message by passing along gossip about a friend who neglected his health and suffered a heart attack as a result.

● Gossip can serve as an antidote to the "grass is greener" syndrome.

Envious of other couples? Well, once you hear the gossip about the "nasty" things going on in their homes, you and your mate are apt to be more grateful for the life you have together.

● Gossip keeps communication channels open.

Little tidbits of gossip are titillating, they're juicy and they keep the conversational ball rolling.

Rap music junkies are as hooked as drug addicts!

CHICAGO — Rap music nuts who don't get a regular "fix" of their favorite songs develop trembling hands, nausea and an unstable pulse — just like dope addicts deprived of drugs!

University researchers here found that 61 percent of hardcore rap music junkies exhibited severe withdrawal symptoms when deprived of the music for less than a week.

"This form of psychological addiction can be just as powerful as the physical addiction associated with drugs," one researcher said.

Work with a jerk? Here's what you can do!

FOLLOWING A FEW simple tips can help you deal with some of the creeps you are likely to meet in your workplace.

By JOE BERGER / Staff writer

As anyone who talks for a living can tell you, there's a creep around every corner. But you can cope with the jerks where you work by following some simple tips from the experts.

In their book Coping With People You Can't Stand (McGraw-Hill), Drs. Rick Brinkman and Rick Kirschner introduce you to some of the lunkheads and louses you're likely to meet in the workplace and tell you how to deal with them. Here are a few of the smartest, along with their tips for keeping the boss at bay.

● The Tank: This guy (or gal) loves to yell, scream and chew people out. He's angry and confrontational, the ultimate in pushy behavior.

Solution: Command respect and keep your cool. Interrupt the attack, repeat what the Tank has just said to show you've been listening, then state your point in a non-threatening way. Be firm but never slam the door in the Tank's face — because he may take that as a challenge and attack again.

● The Sniper: This coward identifies your weaknesses and uses them against you behind your back or in put-downs in front of others.

Solution: Your goal is to bring the Sniper out of hiding and expose him. When someone snipes at you, play what you are saying, repeat what the Sniper has said and ask if that is relevant. Suggest that if there's a problem in the future, the Sniper should discuss it with you one on one.

● The Grenade: This hot-head explodes with unbecoming ranting and raving about things that have nothing to do with what's going on around him.

Solution: Don't blow up or run away. Instead, take control in a friendly way and reduce the Grenade's anger by showing that you're interested in his feelings. Try to learn what sets the Grenade off and avoid saying or doing anything that will cause a future explosion.

● The Know-It-All: Never in doubt, this brat can't stand to be corrected or contradicted. And when something goes wrong, you are always the one to blame.

Solution: Open the Know-It-All's mind to new ideas. Show him you recognize the "brilliance" of his suggestions and when he's let his defenses down, gently push your thoughts onto him. Ask the Know-It-All to be your mentor in his area of expertise, so he spends more time instructing you than obstructing you.

● The Whiner: This poor soul is totally overwhelmed by an unfair world. Nothing ever measures up to the Whiner's standards — and since misery loves company, he brings his problems to you. Offering solutions makes you bad company in his complaining existence.

Solution: Never agree with the Whiner because it only encourages him to keep complaining. Listen to him with an open mind. Perhaps your attitude will change. If that doesn't work, tactfully show him the door.

Comic Jerry Seinfeld notes one of the surest mysteries of life: "It never ceases to amaze me that no matter what goes on in the world, it mostly ends up in the entertainment section of the newspaper every day!"

Russian boozers crowding Alcoholics Anonymous meetings!

Boozing is such a horrible problem in Russia that 70 Alcoholics Anonymous groups have standing-room-only crowds of drunks at their regular meetings.

The first AA group was organized in 1987, but the paranoid Russian thought it was an American C.I.A. front and avoided it like the plague.

The paranoia has faded and AA groups have replaced traditional Russian treatment for alcoholism — potato drunk tanks and dubious medical "cures."

MYSTERY STAR APPEARS OVER

JERUSALEM — Astronomers are trying to explain a bright new star that has appeared in the skies over Bethlehem — a star some experts say heralds the Second Coming of Christ!

Scientists have been tracing the mysterious heavenly body, dubbed Beth-3, since mid-November when it was first sighted over Zuwayza, Jordan, the city just 30 miles east.

Originally experts thought it might be a comet or meteor. But further investigation has shown it's definitely a star — amazingly close to Earth.

Thousands have seen the unusually bright star making its way toward Bethlehem where it now remains over the town.

The star may or may not be related to the recent rash of angel sightings flooding local police stations. More than 500 people report that angels have appeared to them, urging them to journey to the Israeli city to see "a newborn king."

The angel reports remain unconfirmed, but the star is a verified reality that is puzzling experts.

"We're not sure what to make of it," admits noted American astronomer Dr. Gerald Whittingham, who was called over from his home in Boston by Middle Eastern scientists to investigate.

"This star is not on any astronomical chart. There was no record of it until November 17 when it materialized over Zuwayza.

"It's not a part of any constellation ever observed.

"The oddest thing about it is its incredible brightness and the fact that it's shooting still — directly over the small city where Christ was born nearly 2,000 years ago.

Dr. Gerald Whittingham

"Beth-3 is more than four times brighter than any star in the heavens. And its intensity is focused in a very concentrated area.

"If it doesn't begin to move again, it will stop directly over Bethlehem on December 25 — Christmas Day."

Dr. Whittingham says coverage of the star has been sparse in American newspapers. "They consider it just another boring science item," he said.

But the locals take it very seriously.

On November 21, one Jordanian soldier was on night watch at the eastern bank of the Dead Sea when he saw what he describes as "a vision in white" rise from the water and move toward him.

"It was just a shimmering light at first," said the soldier.

"But as it got closer, I saw it taking a human-like form.

"When it was just a few feet away, I saw it was an angel. The angel said, 'Go to Bethlehem, the savior of the world is about to be born.'"

The soldier has since converted from Islam to Christianity and currently awaits the rebirth of Christ.

Leading Bible expert Rev. Louis Marlow says, "The book of Luke tells of an angel who appeared to some shepherds and urged them to travel to Bethlehem to see the baby Jesus.

"The book of Matthew tells the well known story of a bright star that appeared to the wise men and led them to the place of Jesus' birth."

Many scientists and clergymen believe the angels, the star and the birth of Christ are being repeated here in 1994.

"Clearly, after 2,000 years, history is repeating itself," said Rev. Marlint.

"And it's certainly no coincidence that it's happening just in time for Christmas."

Dr. Whittingham is more conservative but doesn't rule out the possibility that the star heralds the Second Coming of Jesus Christ.

"We're watching this phenomenon very closely," said the esteemed scientist. "I'm not going to go on record and say this star heralds the Second Coming. But it's definitely not like any natural heavenly body I've ever investigated."

THEY MEDITATED WITH THE WORLD'S GREATEST PSYCHIC AND WON!

THIS IS HOW HANUSSEN HELPS HIS FRIENDS:

He's helped thousands of people win lotteries– Want his phone number?

MILAN, ITALY - A psycho slasher had left a trail of bloodshed and terror from one end of Italy to the other and police seemed powerless to corral the creep - till a world-famous psychic named Hanussen nailed the maniac in his tracks!

"This sicko had already killed seven defenseless women and we knew he'd keep on killing unless we stopped him - but we didn't have a clue to work with till Hanussen found him for us," recalled Detective Tino Meren. "He gave us a perfect description of the man and then told us where we could find him. I don't know how he did it, but there's no doubt in my mind that he saved some lives - possibly many lives. He was simply amazing." But the capture of the Monster of Milan was just one more amazing tale in the career of the astonishing Hanussen, who also accurately predicted:

- The catastrophic San Francisco earthquake that disrupted the World Series and killed 62 people in 1989.
- The spine-chilling terrorist attack at the 1972 Munich Olympics that left nine innocent Israeli athletes and one policeman dead.
- Mikhail Gorbachev's rise to power in the Soviet Union and the dramatic collapse of the Communist Party around the world.
- The terrifying explosion and fire aboard the Apollo 13 spacecraft that left three American astronauts on the brink of death in outer space. "Don't go up because it will end in disaster," the super psychic had warned NASA prior to the Apollo 13 lift-off in 1970. But after a blast in space damaged the life support system aboard the command module, leaving the astronauts' lives teetering in the balance, Hanussen phoned a frantic President Nixon and accurately predicted the crew would return safely to Earth. He still has a telegram from Nixon thanking him for his moral support.

But while occasionally hobnobbing with world leaders, the seer of the century has devoted his career to helping ordinary men and women find health, wealth and happiness.

He has used his mind-boggling powers to save innocent souls from death, he's helped the lonely find the love of their lives - and he's helped countless thousands of folks win fortunes in the lottery.

"You will receive a large winning in the next months," prophesied clairvoyant Hanussen to a policeman's widow. The woman began to play the lottery and won $116,789.00. She was ecstatic to be able to pay off her mortgage and build a larger children's room for her disabled child.

Many people meditate with Hanussen on a regular basis and report astonishing results: Frank Gomez from Fresno won while playing the California lottery, Emma Seegers from Charlotte hit the jackpot in Atlantic City, and Daniel Preuss from Wheeling got a raise - "It hadn't happened in five years."

Do you have problems? Do you need money?

Then simply pick up the phone and listen to the spiritual messages of the world's greatest psychic, HANUSSEN! Let the power of his voice give you the strength to solve your problems and BEGIN A NEW LIFE!

Receive important spiritual guidance and advice - meditate together with him - and yes, even take the opportunity to pour your heart out to him! Let his power and strength flow towards you!

Soon, you too could be saying: "THANK YOU, HANUSSEN, FOR A NEW LIFE!"

WORLD'S FASTEST BINGO PLAYER!

SPEEDY Ellie moves like an acrobat behind her bingo cards.

Granny plays 72 cards at once — & never misses a number!

SMILING Gal Ellie Cobb proudly displays her stamps

By SANDRA LEE
Correspondent

ASHLAND, Ky. — Ellie Cobb is a quick-handed grandmother who's the world's fastest Bingo player — she can play 72 cards at a time and never miss a number!

"Bingo has always been second nature to me," Mrs. Cobb said. "I just glance at a card one time and I instantly have every number down pitted.

"And the funny thing is I'm really pretty forgetful in all the rest of my life — except when I'm playing Bingo."

The lively 78-year old puts on quite a show when she spreads all her cards out in front of her and becomes a blaze of activity when the game starts.

"I get up and down the table and use my rubber to cover each number when it's called," she explained. "I just have to concentrate and keep moving.

"People tell me I look like an acrobat the way I jump around stretching my arms in every direction. But you have to be fast or you might miss the number that could win the game for you.

"And they never have to save the game down for me because I'm a lot faster than some of the people who are struggling to play seven or eight cards."

The former seamstress says she's loved Bingo all her life and has been playing 6 the days a week since she retired in 1981.

"Sunday is the only day I don't play," she said. "I play at two different places on Wednesday and Friday. And on Saturdays I'll find a place where I can sit and play all day — maybe eight or 10 hours at a time."

Mrs. Cobb refuses to tell how much money she has won playing her favorite game.

"Bingo's a game where you win some and lose some but with so many cards I usually do pretty well," she said. "Some of the other players don't like it when I get on a winning streak but that's not my problem.

"I just tell them everyone is blessed with some talent and playing Bingo is my talent."

Man watches TV with dead buddy for a year!

EAST DERWICH, LONDON — For almost an entire year, a 41-year-old man sat watching television with the corpse of his best buddy sitting upright in an armchair right next to him.

The man kept the death of Frank Mason a secret so that he could continue to collect the dead man's pension, and even told neighbors who complained about the smell that Mr. Mason "had gone to an old people's home."

The corpse was finally discovered when mailmen turned up by mistake at the wrong apartment.

According to authorities, Mason died of natural causes, and was badly decomposed by the time he was found.

London police are charging the man with fraud and preventing the burial of a corpse.

EVIL O.J. HAS BRAINWASHED MY DAUGHTER

...says dad of Simpson's girlfriend

O.J. Simpson's sweetheart, leggy Paula Barbieri, has fallen under his wicked spell and has been brainwashed by the legendary football star, says her fearful father.

"To me, she's acting like she's been brainwashed," said truck driver Vincent Barbieri about the torrid relationship his daughter the Playboy model is having with The Juice.

Paula has visited Simpson often during his stay in the L.A. County Jail. O.J. is charged with murdering his ex-wife and her friend.

She reportedly spent the night before the murders with O.J.

Scientific team brings back startling new photographic proof . . .

AMAZING PHOTOGRAPH, taken by biologist Marcus Smythe, of the real Mrs. Claus relaxing at home.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This stunning photograph and report first appeared in Weekly World News in December 1993. Since that time, Santa co-discoverers Dr. Richard Falk and Marcus Smythe have written a book about their experiences and titled The Spirit of Christmas Revisited. Additionally, Smythe has founded The Rudolph Foundation, an international children's charity based in Geneva, Switzerland. Here we present the amazing story as published last Christmas.

By WILLIAM CARROLL
Correspondent

SANTA CLAUS FOUND IN ARCTIC CIRCLE!

British and American scientists watched in shock and disbelief as the real-life Santa Claus they found at the North Pole glowed bright white — and vanished into thin air!

And far from perpetrating a Christmas hoax, the experts produced a photograph of Santa and Mrs. Claus that hasn't been altered or retouched in any way.

"I saw them with my own two eyes and I still don't believe it," Dr. Richard Falk, whose scholarly books and scientific studies of Arctic life-forms are considered standards in the field, told reporters in Boston, Mass.

"Santa Claus doesn't exist — but there he was for anyone to see," he continued.

"Just don't ask me to explain it. What ever we found up there defies logic. It's the strangest thing I've ever seen."

The mind-boggling drama reportedly unfolded on the morning of December 7. Dr. Falk said that he and a British colleague, biologist Marcus Smythe, were investigating the impact of pollution on Arctic life.

They were less than six miles from the North Pole when Smythe saw "a great smoke rising from a tiny log cabin.

"We thought we were hallucinating," explained Dr. Falk. "The North Pole can be an awfully forbidding place, and to think that someone had built a cabin up there just didn't make sense.

"Explorers will set up camp, of course, but they certainly don't build their shelters out of logs and glass. As we got closer we could see a light through the window.

"Then we saw it — a sleigh and eight reindeer on the roof!"

Peering through the panes of a window, they saw what Smythe described as an "obese, white-haired man and an elderly, white-haired woman" relaxing in chairs beside a pot-bellied stove.

"It might sound wild, but our hearts were racing," Smythe continued.

"We looked at each other for a moment, but neither one of us knew what to say.

"Just then, the old man opened the door and invited us in."

Dr. Falk said he and Smythe accepted the invitation. Once inside, Smythe took a camera out of his backpack and asked the old man if he could take a picture.

"He was silent for a few seconds, which seemed like an eternity to me," said Smythe. "Then he said, 'All right.' When he sat back down, I took the picture.

"Richard asked the old couple why they lived in such a remote area, and they replied that they loved the peace and quiet.

"Then Richard asked if he could take a picture of them, and they agreed."

Dr. Falk said that as he was taking the picture, the cabin started to glow, first blue, then white. The whole cabin was glowing. Then, everything vanished around us as if it had never even been there.

"Suddenly, Richard and I were standing outdoors. Everything we had seen, including the couple we photographed, had just disappeared."

Dr. Falk and Smythe decided to cut their trip short. The single photograph they took of the old couple has since been analyzed by experts who say it has not been altered or retouched in any way.

"We are preparing a full report that we hope to publish next spring," said Dr. Falk.

"We want the whole world to hear about our experience — even if we can't really explain it."

Republican superstar Newt Gingrich is right on target!

ORPHANAGES MADE AMERICA GREAT . . . SO LET'S BRING 'EM BACK!

MY AMERICA
By ED ANGER

I'm madder than Oliver Twist with a bowl of cold porridge over all the liberal fuss House Speaker Newt Gingrich got when he said most welfare kids would be better off in orphanages.

You're damn right, Newt. They WOULD be better off in orphanages.

I was only in an orphanage way back during the Great Depression, c. 1938. I was only 4 years old, but my poor mother had been struck down with tuberculosis and had to go to the sanitarium.

But I wouldn't trade in one single hour I spent at the children's home in Charlotte, N.C., for anything in the world.

All of us little orphans were required to work in the orphanage farm every day before and after school.

We plowed, picked vegetables, baled hay, milked cows and even sheared sheep to make our own wool sweaters for the cold winters.

And the only handouts we proud little mountaineers ever took was maybe a piece of candy on Christmas Day and a cup of hot chocolate from the church ladies in town.

We didn't need Tower Records and Sega Genesis to be happy. We respected our elders and said "Yes, Ma'am" and "No, Ma'am" to our teachers.

We even said our prayers in the classroom, believe it or not. That was back when it was legal to talk to God in the United States without getting sued by the American Civil Liberties Union or the Democratic Party, by golly!

But what makes me so pig-killing mad is all the bleeding-heart liberal crap about building new orphanages across our great land. It's an idea whose time has come.

BACK TO GOD

But these bright-eyed, bushy-tailed, single parent, welfare kids of orphanages and we will turn this country around in fact it will make our great

☐ I agree with Ed and Newt — welfare kids belong in orphanages that educate and care for children, giving them the love and support they need to become solid, happy, contributing members of society.

☐ No! Welfare kids belong on the streets with parents who abuse and neglect them until they're old enough to have children themselves — and collect welfare checks of their own.

Abraham Lincoln's last Christmas gift

. . . he reunites a Southern gal & her Rebel sweetheart!

PRESIDENT Abraham Lincoln showed his kindness even to the toughest Rebs.

On Christmas Day 1864, attractively attired Laura Jones made a desperate call on the President of the United States. She absolutely had to get in to see Abraham Lincoln!

A holiday peacefulness had settled over the White House, even though America was still caught in the throes of the Civil War.

As dusk settled over the White House, Lincoln finished signing a stack of papers. He laid down his pen and sighed.

"What else is there to sign, Mr. Secretary?" Lincoln asked Gideon Welles. "Are we finally through for the day?"

"Mr. President, there is one special request from a 23-year-old girl who has been trapped here in Washington since the war began," Welles responded. "She desires to have a pass so she might travel safely to Richmond, in order to have a Christmas wedding to her sweetheart, Jimmie Joe Ballinger — a Confederate soldier."

There was a long pause. Then Lincoln had his butler, Billy Slade, go call the girl to come in. Lincoln spoke gently with the forlorn Laura Jones and her sincerity seemed to make a deep impression on the President.

After attentively listening to Laura's story, Lincoln nodded his head, and with a few strokes of his pen, proceeded to write some words on a card. He handed the travel pass to Miss Jones and wished her a Merry Christmas.

Laura Jones could not speak. Her eyes brimmed with tears of happiness. She was so grateful that she fell to her knees before the President.

"Get up," ordered Lincoln in a soft fatherly tone. "Do not kneel to me, but thank God and go!"

"Goodbye, Mr. Lincoln," she said. "I shall probably never again see you until we meet in Heaven."

President Lincoln was deeply moved.

"I am afraid with all my troubles I shall never get to the resting place you speak of, but if I do, I'm sure I will find you there. That you wish me to get there is, I believe, the best wish you could possibly make for me. Goodbye, Miss Jones."

Helping Laura Jones, a 19-year-old girl in love with an enemy soldier, was one of the nicest Christmas presents Lincoln ever gave.

And it was his last. Less than four months later he was shot dead at Ford's Theater.

Hundreds of Americans and relentless Europeans have paid $30,000 each to a French scientist who has found a way to put people to death and bring them safely back to life.

"I have been in Heaven and [illegible] saw the curtain, the white light, the angels and you, even God Himself," said excited Hildegard Knuste, a 33-year old hairdresser who lives in Paris.

"It was an experience of a lifetime and one I will never forget. It was just like the movie Flatliners [illegible] and I'm going to do it again at the earliest [illegible]."

Dr. Andre Lavigne, 61, of Paris has been [illegible] people behind their own backs [illegible] the people — [illegible] and has just caught on with wealthy young Americans.

Dr. Lavigne has established a secret clinic where patients are injected with a special solution that stops their hearts.

Seconds later, Dr. Lavigne uses [illegible] to shock the patient back to life.

"I have a 100 percent success [illegible] record with patients [illegible] minutes along with electric shock to bring the clients back.

"I have a [illegible] contract to advance rebirthing, one of my responsibility to ensure they don't come back. If they or their lawyers aren't satisfied with the legal arrangements, they don't take the trip."

Dr. Lavigne realizes he risks arrest by Paris police every time he puts someone to death.

"But I am so confident of my procedure that I'm rewarded is worth the risk," he said.

"Apparently my clients feel the same way."

Golfer hits hole-in-one — and drops dead on the spot!

By JACK ALEXANDER / Staff writer

REHOBOTH, Mass. — Golfing oldster Emil Kijek was ecstatic when his ball dropped in the cup for the first hole-in-one of his life — and then he dropped dead.

The tragedy occurred a few minutes after Kijek, 76, had realized a life's dream with the picture-perfect shot of his golfing life.

"My wife J go right to the green, drop, and roll and disappear," said Marvin Dumont, one of Kijek's golfing buddies.

"I and, 'I think it went in the hole' but we said, 'No, it probably rolled off the green.'"

Dumont said other members of the foursome were more excited about the "ace" than Kijek.

"Emil was happy but he wasn't jumping with joy and all that," he added.

Kijek was getting ready to tee off at the next hole at Pine Valley Golf Course when he suddenly rolled his eyes and said "Oh, no." Then he collapsed.

Paramedics desperately tried to revive the elderly golfer, but he was pronounced dead at Rhode Island Hospital.

"It's a tragedy. He was a joy to golf with and a real nice guy," Dumont said.

Man who predicted fax machines and cars in 1863 was called an idiot!

JULES VERNE

PARIS — Way back in 1863, famed science fiction author Jules Verne wrote a book that described cars, electric chairs and fax machines to a T!

And what's more, his publisher called Verne an "idiot" and turned the novel down because it was "too far-fetched!"

Verne rocked the world with classic books like Around the World in 80 Days and 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea, but the prophetic Paris in the 20th Century was never published in his lifetime.

The 316-page novel has just been released by Editions Hachette-Le Cherche Midi.

FITNESS FANATICS ARE KILLING THEMSELVES — WITH EXERCISE!

People are actually exercising themselves to death, warn experts — who have given the name "morbid exercising" to this shocking new disease.

"Morbid exercising is when exercising is taken to the extreme. People become obsessed with exercise to the point where it takes over their whole lives," declared Dr. Alayne Yates. "They run with pain because they're exercising constantly and continue to exercise through illness — which can result in permanent disability or even death.

"Morbid exercisers continue to work out even when they have medical problems such as heart disease or bone fractures.

"It's a new disease — people are actually exercising themselves to death."

The respected British medical journal The Lancet recounted the story of one 24-year-old woman who continued running even though she had a broken hip — because she was afraid that if she stopped running she'd gain weight.

Her hip didn't heal until she was finally able to get her morbid exercising under control. The guru of running, Jim Fixx, had been diagnosed and died while running, said Dr. Kelvin Lashley, a noted psychiatrist.

"No doubt about it — morbid exercising is a new disease. One study documented 16 cases of death during jogging."

Based in part on a study in which 56 runners were given some basic psychological tests, Dr. Lashley estimated that up to 5 percent of exercise enthusiasts become morbid exercisers. That would mean there are about 12 million morbid exercisers in the U.S.

"It's a serious problem," he added. "If you overexercise with heart or other medical problems, you could be killing yourself.

"If people can't control their morbid exercising, they should seek help from their doctor, who can then recommend appropriate treatment."

Dear Disappointed Student in Chapel Hill: College puts "clergy" that way to straight A's — but neither you they're good-looking!

Dear Unsure Groom in Apple: The next time you light a match to your bride, turn the lights OFF!

Dear Unsatisfied Lady in Boston: I don't care what your boyfriend says. His penis DID NOT come from Switzerland!

Dear Perplexed in Orchard: I know why some wife bangs out at the brick wall — and sleep alone tonight, or else you!

Dear Curious in Maryland: If psychiatrists aren't thieves, why do they take money from crazy people?

Dear Wondering in Whiteville: It's truth time of your business, but I didn't tell the last time I were underpaid!

Dear Dottie: I am 6 years old. My big sister says I'm stupid because I believe in Santa Claus. She says Mommy And Daddy put presents under the tree because Santa isn't real. Is my sister lying to me? — Billy in Dallas

Dear Billy: I've never met Santa Claus but I do know his wife. And from what she tells me, Santa Claus not only exists, he's the hottest thing this side of a burning barn on Dasher road, North Pole eighty!

I wasn't worth killing till you straightened me out!

Dear Dottie: I would like to take this opportunity to thank you from the bottom of my heart for changing my life. You probably don't remember me, but about six years ago I wrote you and confessed that I had been molesting children. I expected you to advise me to see a psychiatrist to help me come to grips with the abuse I suffered at the hands of my parents when I was a child. Instead, you advised me to "get a big gun" and blow my brains out. Your response was so shocking — and final — that I sat down and cried. As I did, I saw the light — and immediately turned my life around. I have never molested a child since that day in fact, I have devoted my life to helping children through various charities and organizations. Thanks again, Dottie. In my book, your advice was just what the doctor ordered. You are a genius, indeed. — Grateful in D.C.

Dear Grateful: When the Good Lord gave me brains He gave me a few extra helpings. Need I say more?

Make my little brother zip up his pants, Dottie!

Dear Dottie: My little brother is the world's biggest jerk. He's 11 years old and every time my teenage friends come over he always finds some excuse to walk into the room with his zipper down. Mom works full-time, so she's not home to make him behave. I'm sick and tired of his stupid behavior. Dottie: What am I going to do? — Hopping Mad in Kobe

Dear Hopping Mad: I'm certainly no advocate of violence, but I will tell you this: Since we're talking about your LITTLE brother, you're ENTITLED to throw your weight around! Get my drift?

No-account hubby won't stop boozin' and cruisin'

Dear Dottie: My husband and I recently separated because he has two serious problems. Alcohol and women. He has made it clear that he wants to come back to me but he makes me heave about the fact that he won't change his ways for anybody — including me. I love my man and I really do want him back but I don't know if I can put up with his shenanigans anymore. What should I do, Dottie? — Undecided in Colorado Springs

Dear Undecided: If you think swinging and alcohol abuse are "swingin' good," by all means take the next boat. Just don't come whining to me when the house-addled idiot gives you AIDS — and beats the hell out of you when he's blind drunk!

Dottie will answer your letters — and tell it like it is. Just write to her, c/o Weekly World News, P.O. Box [illegible], Dallas, Texas 75265.

Which one of the football players got me pregnant?

Dear Serena: I'm a cheerleader at a college that has a super football team — but I'm afraid I had a little too much fun at one of our victory parties.

I was doing a lot of drinking at the party and ended up having a pretty wild time with a bunch of the football players. I don't even remember what guys I went to bed with that night but now I'm pregnant and I don't have any idea who the father is. Serena, I haven't told anyone about this so that's why I'm turning to you. Please tell me who the father of my child is so I can confront him without getting a whole bunch of innocent players in trouble. — Mom-To-Be in California

NEW STRAIN OF ALZHEIMER'S ATTACKS TEENAGERS!

By ANN WILLIS / Correspondent

WASHINGTON — As if teenagers didn't have enough to worry about, researchers have discovered a new type of Alzheimer's disease that disables young adults!

Nobody knows for sure how long Early Onset Alzheimer's has been around. But at least one expert says it is not only rampant, it has a lot to do with everything failure rates in schools — and is a prime cause of teen suicide.

"Johnny might not be able to read because Johnny might have Alzheimer's," French neurologist Dr. Pierre LaBelle, co-discoverer of EOA, told colleagues at a scientific confer ence here. "EOA is an insidious disease," he continued, "one that is destroying teenagers before they reach their prime.

"The actual numbers are hidden because many victims get depressed and commit suicide before they are diagnosed.

"But from all indications, EOA is striking up to a million teenagers a year world wide."

Alzheimer's disease has historically affected people over the age of 50 but the new variant has been known to strike victims as young as 13.

As with ordinary Alzheimer's, the cause is unknown — and diagnosis is difficult.

In fact, it is next to impossible to prove that a person has either Alzheimer's or EOA until an autopsy is performed after the patient dies.

There may be millions of victims, says scientist

"Diagnosing EOA in young people is difficult, but the symptoms are clear," explains Dr. LaBelle.

"Victims suffer memory loss and have difficulty performing routine tasks.

"They have trouble speaking and become disoriented. They misplace things and are extremely moody.

"They suffer personality changes and loss of initiative.

"As you might imagine, these symptoms can lead to depression and suicide.

"They can also mimic the symptoms we find in teenagers who use drugs.

"And to be perfectly frank, there isn't a doubt in my mind that some teens who are accused of smoking marijuana or taking LSD actually suffer from EOA."

Early Onset Alzheimer's was first diagnosed in a 14-year-old boy in August 19th. Since that time, at least 34,000 additional victims have been identified.

And computer projections suggest that the disease will claim millions of victims in years to come.

"EOA is going to take a terrible toll on society," said Dr. LaBelle.

"On a high note, there are treatments to extend life, and the quality of life, when diagnosed early enough."

'Now... turn a little to the left'

"The look was serious, simple sophisticated." That's what 8-year-old make-over artist Bobby Clarke might be saying as she beautifies her chimpanzee pal, Chris.

Let's hope Bobby's mom is as amused as she was when she saw the pint-size hairdresser, from Chevenley, England, is using her best party wig to turn her pet into a gorgeous temptress.

GIANT HOROSCOPE

By SELENA SABAK
PSYCHIC ASTROLOGER TO THE RICH AND FAMOUS

For the week of Mon., Dec. 26 — Sat., Jan. 1

ARIES
Mar. 21-Apr. 19

A friend's recent crisis has triggered your bad mood. Stop feeling sorry for yourself! Congratulate the fellow. Your time is coming.

Your past generosity to an old pal pays off with a surprise payback this week. You're boosted for your loyalty and devotion.

A subdued mood makes tempting, but avoid it. Shellfish pose a special danger this week, so stick to vegetables and poultry.

TAURUS
Apr. 20-May 20

Your blunt, realistic manner gets you in trouble when advising a friend. You're better off listening and holding back the awful truth.

Your home or an old acquaintance presses you unexpectedly for your patience and consistency.

A Pisces in yellow confronts you on the street with a bizarre request. Take care how you act.

Two words portray this weekend to a tee-do.

GEMINI
May 21-June 20

Take a realistic approach to everything, whether it be love or just having a good time. Put your ability to adapt to good use.

If your spirits are high this week, try to cheer up someone in need. If you're not the friendly type, find a shoulder to cry on. Release your emotions!

Your mind will be restless this week. Stay away from matters involving money.

CANCER
June 21-July 22

Unexpected and exciting events will begin to unfold this week and it's no time to be wishy-washy about any course of action you may want to take. If you see someone who interest you, make your move!

Doing chores around the house will make you feel good about yourself. Then spend time with chums.

Your companions will have friends looking to you for help. Give freely of yourself.

LEO
July 23-Aug. 22

Your natural vanity has you leaping to conclusions that could drive a wedge between you and a loved one this week. Comments you thought were aimed at you were actually directed toward someone else. Give them time to pay the benefit of the doubt when controversy arises.

Deference to authority adorns your style. Keep up the good work. An opportunity is coming your way.

A child will bring you luck.

VIRGO
Aug. 23-Sept. 22

Everything is coming up roses. A stranger makes a decision that will bring joy and financial security. Listen carefully to any proposal, no matter how strange it sounds. Don't tell anyone to take a flying leap.

Your natural desire to help someone in trouble could get you in hot water. Step and think before you jump.

Something small and gray brings you comfort. Watch for it.

LIBRA
Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Now is the time to resolve a long-standing family dispute. Make the first move and don't be afraid to compromise. Others will respect your courage.

A sudden change in travel plans may throw you curves, but don't lose your cool. You are much better off staying close to home.

Friendliness could open the door to a terrific opportunity in the very near future.

SCORPIO
Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Don't be greedy when an unusual investment scheme arises. Rely on the advice of experts and your own common sense when you're deciding whether to invest.

Now is the time to tackle an important project you have been postponing for too long. Get organized and get to work.

Someone close is suffering in silence. Be a sympathetic listener, but keep your opinions to yourself.

SAGITTARIUS
Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Honesty and wisdom are some of your strengths. Both may be tested this week by a friend or relative. The decision is your conviction.

It's normal for you to be judgmental and intolerant of people. But be patient and understanding this week.

Don't look for quick solutions to problems. A hurried compromise may result in temporary peace, but won't help you in the long run.

CAPRICORN
Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Family members are sure to be combative if you don't stop being bossy. Compromise to avoid nasty squabbles — but not too much!

This is an excellent time to cultivate new friends. An especially young and attractive woman may surprise you with her insight into what makes you tick.

Fair-weather and true friends show themselves for what they are — and you may be shocked.

If your birthday is this week . . .

Mon., Dec. 26 — Sat., Jan. 1

You'll see how your friendly nature pays off after you've lived in a total stranger. Accept this good fortune as a reward for your good behavior toward people.

Spring will be a time for reflection. Allow yourself a chance to be alone with your thoughts. From this you will gain new and helpful insights into the world around you.

A summer romance could blossom into a beautiful relationship if you don't lose sight

AQUARIUS
Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You are too demanding and intolerant of others. Don't expect too much out of people.

A close friend or relative may ask you to bail them out of a financial crisis. They may need more than just money.

One of your strong points is a great imagination, but you haven't been using this asset as an entertainer or conversationalist as much as you should. Now is the time to develop your talents.

PISCES
Feb. 19-Mar. 20

A run of good fortune can bring you great happiness if you guard against taking it for granted. Enjoy all the contacts and conversations you can!

Fleeing from reality could get you in trouble this week. Strive to see the cold, hard facts in any endeavor. Be especially critical where your health is involved.

Family members could use some

GUARANTEE YOUR CHILD'S SUCCESS! TEACH HIM AT HOME

Children taught at home by parents or tutors do as well as kids educated in public schools!

A surprising new government-funded report reveals these amazing facts about teaching kids:

- When children educated at home in Alaska and Arizona were tested, they were above average compared to schoolchildren given the same tests across the country.
- In Los Angeles, kids taught in at-home groups by a tutor scored higher than those in public schools.
- A Californian schooled entirely at home was admitted to Harvard University.

"Children taught at home do as well or better than the kids who go to school," said attorney Patricia Lines.

At least 60,000 children of school age are now being taught at home. Most are in elementary grades, she said.

When they get to high school level, parents usually send them to public school.

"Many educators have expressed concern that children educated at home will fail academically and socially," a spokesman said. "But the evidence does not support this."

Shirley Gardener of Mesa, Ariz., teaches two of her children, ages 6 and 14, at home, but her six older children went through public school.

"They had a lot of problems," said Mrs. Gardener.

"They were unhappy during their school years. My other two are much more well-adjusted.

"They do better in relating to children their age."

CRYSTAL BALL BLOWS UP AND KILLS 7!

By KEVIN CREID

MADRID — A psychic reading at a wedding reception ended tragically when a fortune-teller's crystal ball exploded, killing seven members of the wedding party and wounding five others!

And some reports say the deadly blast was caused by the angry spirit of the husband's former wife!

The sudden explosion that left the young newlyweds Tomas and Maria Reyes married less than an hour, and five guests

The psychic, Lupe Martinez, was a friend who offered the crystal ball reading as a wedding gift.

"It happened so fast," said Laura Sanchez, a guest who lost an arm in the explosion. "One moment we were drinking, laughing, listening to Tomas and Maria's fortunes being told. The next moment there were body parts and blood everywhere.

"We were asking innocent questions like how many children they would have, where they would live and if they would be rich.

"But then one talkative person asked if Tomas would ever be able to forget his former wife Rosa who died two years ago.

"Lupe looked down into the crystal and a frantic, troubled look came across her face.

"But before she could say anything we heard the loud boom and felt the shock of the explosion.

"I knew it was Rosa who blew the crystal ball apart. She was a very jealous woman and I could feel her presence around me."

But Officer Miguel Garcia of the Madrid police disagrees.

"Our bomb squad is going over the crime scene with a fine-tooth comb," said Officer Garcia. "We haven't been able to rule out the possibility that a bomb was planted intentionally.

"We're looking a lot of ugly rumors in connection with the case - people who think the blow-up was the act of a jealous ghost. But there's always a perfectly logical reason for these things and we're determined to find it."

Nevertheless, noted parapsychologist Dr. Carlos Ruiz has run a series of tests at the area and has since begun to doubt that the blast resulted from supernatural energies.

"This isn't the first time a mysterious explosion from the afterlife has rocked a wedding," said Dr. Ruiz.

"Jealousy is a strong emotion that can often give people who die the power to retaliate viciously from beyond the grave when their spouse or lover tries to find happiness with another."

Mystery explosion wipes out bride, groom, wedding guests — and the fortune-teller

Here's a tearful Christmas story you'll never forget

Girl crushed to death playing Santa for her poor family!

HEARTBREAKER: Kristy Delaney had her life cut short in a mission of love.

Editor's Note: In one of the most heartrending holiday stories ever, a poverty-stricken 13-year-old lost her life a few days before Christmas — because she desperately wanted gifts for her younger brothers and sisters. The tragic tale generated an outpouring of letters and calls from Weekly World News readers in 1988, when it was first published. We repeat it again for those who may have missed its message of selfless love.

By SUSAN JAMISON
Staff writer

POTEAU, Okla. — Penniless teen Kristy Delaney died tragically just before Christmas when she was digging through the ruins of a burned-out store looking for presents for her brothers and sisters — and a wall collapsed on her, crushing her!

The 13-year-old girl was still clutching a bag of toys for her seven siblings when rescuers uncovered her body under a pile of rubble.

"It was just little five-and-dime stuff," said Poteau Police Chief Bob Hendricks. "It was stuff she wanted to give to her brothers and sisters at Christmas."

Kristy's single mom Judy said the pretty teen was her best friend and helper and that the girl took it hard when the family couldn't afford Christmas presents on their skimpy Social Security income.

"We never had much," the grieving mom recalled. "I was never able to give them the things they would find but we had still love. We had a happy family. We had each other.

"That day . . . the day she died . . . Kristy said she was going to go to the store that had the fire to see if she could find some toys to give us presents. I told her not to go [illegible] bag," Judy said. "Her friend said there were toys scattered around her when she was found.

"I'm having a hard time understanding [illegible] but she's gone. I look for her everywhere and I see her everywhere. She was such a beautiful, loving little girl.

"Now she's gone and I miss her terribly. So do her brothers and sisters. Christmas just won't be the same without her. It won't ever be the same."

How you can sleep like a baby!

Five out of six people who complain of insomnia don't really have the sleep disorder, says Dr. Stanley Fleisman, a psychiatrist and sleep expert.

"Studies conducted in sleep labs show that most people complaining of insomnia sleep only about one hour less than the average sleeper," Dr. Fleisman told Weekly World News.

One study shows that most people who complained they slept less than five hours a night actually were sleeping seven hours or more. Another found those who claimed it took an hour to fall asleep usually dozed off in 15 minutes, on average.

Other research discovered that people's estimates of how long they sleep depend largely on their mood. Happy people believe they sleep longer than they do. Deeply depressed people think they sleep less.

Victims of imaginary insomnia are convinced their condition is real, Dr. Fleisman said.

And the problem is as serious as real insomnia because "it can drive people to take sleeping pills and may trigger a drug habit," Dr. Fleisman added.

If you feel you have a problem sleeping, here's what to do, according to Dr. Fleisman and Dr. James Hodge:

Stop worrying about not sleeping enough. And, as you get older, expect to sleep less. Try to have something exciting to look forward to each day. Those who do, wake up rejuvenated and feeling well-rested while those who don't tend to complain they didn't get enough sleep.

Don't take sleeping pills unless you're advised to do so by a doctor. If you're convinced you have a serious sleep problem, consult a sleep specialist in your area.

Connecticut pastor gets murderer out of jail so he can tie the knot!

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. — A forgiving pastor who practiced what he preached not only helped his son's killer get out of prison, but presided at his wedding.

The Rev. Walter Everett spoke from the heart when he told Michael Carlucci and his bride at the altar:

"Love means knowing that you can say, 'I'm sorry,' and that the other person will forgive you. 'I'm sorry' and 'I forgive you' are the key words in any relationship."

Carlucci, 34, shot Everett's 24-year-old son, Scott, during a drunken fight in 1987. Carlucci, who said he never intended to kill Scott, was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to five years in prison.

Goofy guru's wacky plan to halt the spread of AIDS

RANCHI, India — Goofy guru Jagdish Dutta is terrified that shaking hands will spread AIDS — so he's recommending that everyone reach for the sky and shout "Shalom!" instead.

Fire-eater busted for DUI after failing breath test!

Darryn Saville says it wasn't booze that caused him to appear drunk on a police breath test. It was liquid fuel used in his fire-eating act.

"Darryn's case is that the reading was affected by the amount of paraffin he had consumed or had in his mouth during a performance a half hour before he was arrested for drunk driving," his lawyer explained. The arrest occurred as Darryn was driving home after performing his fire-eating act at a pub.

A breath test by cops showed Saville was 3 ½ times over the legal limit. Judges in Canterbury, England, were told. But Saville, 28, says a unique breath test will prove it was the paraffin and not alcohol.

Paraffin is a waxy crystalline, flammable substance used chiefly in coating and sealing candles and in cosmetics. Paraffin also is a vital part of a fire-eater's act.

"If the result is that the amount of paraffin Darryn consumes during his performance does not affect the machine, he has no option but to plead guilty," said his attorney.

Dr. Norman Vincent Peale's Christmas message of love

The late Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, world-renowned minister and author of the best-selling The Power of Positive Thinking, provided Weekly World News readers with a message of Christmas love a few years ago. Here is the heartwarming story from his own past:

I learned an important lesson one Christmas Eve when I was very young and shopping with my father.

Tired and loaded down with packages, I was thinking how good it would be to get home when a beggar approached us. He was a pitiful sight, dressed in rags and shivering in the cold.

My father, who had as big a heart for humanity as any man I ever knew, said, "Norman, it's Christmas Eve. You shouldn't treat a man that way."

"But, Dad, he's nothing but a bum."

"Bum?" he said. "There is no such thing as a bum. He is a child of God, my boy. Maybe he hasn't made the most of himself but still he is a child of God. You must always look upon a man with compassion. I want you to give him something. Think of all the blessings the Lord has given us."

I didn't think we were so favored since my father's salary was very small. However, we always did have enough to eat and clothes to wear.

My father pulled out a dollar which was a lot for his means and said, "I want you to take this dollar and give it to that man. Tell him you are giving him this dollar in the name of Christ."

Reluctantly I caught up with the man and said, "Excuse me, sir. I give you this dollar in the name of Christ."

He leered at me with absolute surprise before a wonderful smile spread across his face. I forgot that he was dirty and unshaven. Instead I saw the nobility of the man shine through his face. Graciously he said to me, "I thank you, young sir, in the name of Christ."

I hope that the passage of this story — that love brings

Clarence Crane was going broke during the hot summer months because his chocolate products melted into blobs. So in 1913 he invented a hard candy mint to sell when his chocolate business dropped off — and the result was Life Savers!

The Cleveland candy manufacturer made its new candy with a machine originally designed for making medicine pills. He had the machine adapted to put holes in the candy so that it would be shaped like little [illegible]

Crane realized the mints looked much like life preservers, so he called his hard candy "Life Savers."

That one day Edward John Noble, a young New York City salesman of trolley advertising space, tried a Life Saver. And he was so impressed that he took a train to Cleveland to sell Crane on the idea of advertising the new product in New York trolley cars.

But Crane thought that his real business was chocolates, and Life Savers he got rid of the ad salesman. Crane [illegible]

Noble then decided there was no reason Life Savers had to be sold only in candy shops, so he began promoting them in other stores, including barber shops, restaurants and saloons.

Sales soared, and Noble got rich.

7 great ways to toot your own horn on the job!

By BOB SHAVELSON / Correspondent

You can toot your own horn to get the credit you deserve — and by learning when and how to toot, you can do it without antagonizing others, says business expert Robert Ringer.

Here are a few tips from Ringer, coauthor of The C Zone Peak Performance Under Pressure:

1. Don't brag too often. When you toot your own horn, make sure your achievement is worth it.

2. Share the glory. Give credit to other people who have helped you. Show you're a team player. By emphasizing how well you work with others, you'll increase your chances of getting a promotion.

3. Avoid talking about "golden oldies." Bosses want to hear about your latest accomplishment — not about what you did last month.

4. Tailor your toots to your audience. Report all your [illegible] your boss might be interested in about how much money you've saved the firm, or in the production supervisor about the big sales you've made, because you're bragging to the wrong audience.

5. Be willing to admit your blunders. Take responsibility for the things you have done wrong. This will make others more receptive when you talk about what you've accomplished.

6. Don't brag to your co-workers — they can't help you get promoted. Make your colleagues known to those who can help you get ahead.

7. Be specific. Don't talk about how hard you work — talk in specifics. It's not nearly as impressive to claim, "We're saving lots of money on office supplies," as it is to report, "We're saving

The miracle in your pantry — BAKING SODA!

AMAZING PRODUCT is a must in every household to cleanse, deodorize, extinguish fire and even replenish health and hygiene

By SUSAN JAMISON, Staff Writer

In a world of chemicals and pollutants, one super substance stands out as pure, powerful and harmless to human health and the environment: Ordinary old-fashioned baking soda!

The miracle substance, known scientifically as sodium bicarbonate, has scores of uses, costs only pennies and is on shelves in the nearest supermarket. What's more, it works better than most of the chemical concoctions pushed on us by industrial labs.

"It is a great compliment to others," says Alvin Cook, head of a private investigating service in Los Angeles. "It really is about all I use in the house. I put one in my refrigerator to keep it sweet, and it's not real abrasive."

Here are just some of the uses you can put baking soda to around your home:

● Clean stains out of your coffee pot or tea pot with baking soda.

● Use as a mouthwash by dissolving a teaspoon baking soda in a half glass of water and rinsing the mouth. Leaves them feeling clean.

● Put baking soda in your dishwasher to remove odors.

● Pour a cup baking soda into your dishwasher to remove the odor of dirty dishes and then start the wash cycle.

● Baking soda will clean computer monitors and keyboards.

● Use a mixture of baking soda and water to clean your refrigerator.

● Soak flat soda cans in baking soda to remove the sticky residue.

● Add baking soda to your wash to brighten clothes and make them smell fresh.

● Put baking soda in your shoes to reduce

HUMAN SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION!

Some jobs put you at greater risk of mysteriously bursting into flames!

WASHINGTON — More plumbers burst into flames and burn to a crisp as victims of Human Spontaneous Combustion than people in any other profession, a new government study shows.

By DAVID WELK
Correspondent

Nobody can explain why plumbers are at greater risk than other folks.

But of the 17,307 people who fell prey to the strange phenomenon worldwide in 1993, the last year for which figures are available, 17,073 — that's 68 percent — were plumbers, explained one expert.

"HSC affects very few people but for some reason, plumbers suffer an inordinate number of casualties," the expert said.

HSC has afflicted thousands of people throughout history and nobody has ever been able to figure out what causes victims to burst into flames and burn to ash from the inside out.

Modern victims are generally under heavy stress, but researchers say the link is tenuous at best.

After plumbers, the following professions rounded out the Top 10 most afflicted by HSC in 1993:

2. Elementary school teachers, 1,210.
3. Cab drivers, 908.
4. Data processing clerks, 890.
5. Dentists, 786.
6. Clergymen, 673.
7. Psychiatrists, 345.
8. Police officers, 215.
9. Actors, actresses, 188.
10. All other occupations, 177.

MORE THAN 17,000 PEOPLE exploded into flames in 1993 like this tragic woman, left. A new study links Human Spontaneous Combustion with the occupations of its victims.

HOW SANTA CLAUS BECAME A CHRISTMAS TRADITION

By DALE EVANS ROGERS

Former movie and television cowgirl Dale Evans rode to fame and fortune with her partner Roy Rogers. Here she traces the fascinating story of Santa Claus which is taken from her book Christmas is Always. In this excerpt, Dale tells how a Turkish man named Nicholas began the tradition of holiday gift giving.

Santa Claus is one of America's most cherished Christmas traditions — but just how did he get that way?

Well, the figure of Santa Claus is actually a symbol of the spirit of giving. He is based on a real man named Nicholas who lived many years ago in Turkey.

His legend started in Turkey . . .

Nicholas' father was a rich merchant who for years had no children. He and his wife made a promise to God that if He would send them a child, they would train him to love and serve God.

God answered their prayers and sent a boy, whom they named Nicholas. When the old couple died, they left Nicholas a great deal of money. The Spirit of the Lord prompted young Nicholas to give away all he had with the exception of three small bags of gold — enough to keep him nicely for the rest of his life.

Then one day Nicholas heard the weeping of a neighbor's daughter, and he overheard the father telling her that he was too poor to give her a dowry for her marriage. In those days, a girl could not marry unless she had a dowry — a gift of money — to bring to her husband. If she could not do this, her father had to sell her as a slave.

Nicholas couldn't bear to hear the girl cry. He crept behind a bush by the neighbor's house and tossed one of the bags of gold through a window.

He did not want them to know who did it because he was a modest man.

So the daughter was happily married.

But there were three daughters in the family and soon it was the next daughter's turn.

The father was still very poor and again Nicholas heard weeping and tossed a bag of gold through the window.

By this time, the father was determined to know who the "angel of charity" was — so when it was the third daughter's turn he stationed a watchman outside his window to catch the wonderful benefactor. When Nicholas tossed his last bag of gold, the man grabbed him and took him inside, where the grateful father thanked him by ensuring the future of his three girls.

Of course, this became well known in town, which embarrassed Nicholas. He decided to go away to become a priest, since he loved to serve God and his fellow man.

When he had finished his studies, Nicholas went to the town of Myra. The townsfolk there were trying to elect a new bishop to take the place of the old bishop who had just died. They couldn't agree on the man to fill the vacancy so they decided to make the next out-of-town priest who walked into their cathedral the bishop.

Nicholas came along and stepped into the cathedral — to be welcomed by the shouts of the clergy, who immediately proclaimed him the new Bishop of Myra.

Nicholas became known as "the patron of the children" for his untiring efforts to help and teach them.

Each year on his birthday — December 6 — Nicholas would give presents to the children.

This idea of giving presents to children soon spread to Europe, and it was always done in memory of St. Nicholas, who was such an outstanding example of the spirit of Christmas.

The name "Santa Claus" is the Dutch name for St. Nicholas and we adopted "Santa Claus" when the early Dutch settlers came to New York. The English called him "St. Nicholas" and sometimes, "old Kris Kringle."

. . . but he was named by the Dutch!

More children fear holidays than love them!

More children fear the Christmas Season than love it!

That's the shocking finding of a 1993 survey of school children in 14 states ages 8 to 18.

The university study says 61 percent of the children they interviewed report violent nightmares involving reindeer, elves and Santa Claus.

Only 31 percent looked forward to Christmas.

Six percent said they had no strong feelings about the holiday.

a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!

Blind boy sees Santa

Having come into the world blind, little Tommy Collins has had to rely on a deep-rooted belief that just because he can't see something doesn't mean it doesn't exist.

Yet most sightless children really do have a way to picture the beautiful things that surround their world of darkness, as we can see in this heartwarming photo of Tommy "seeing" Santa with his fingers.

The town that forgot Christmas!

For many years Eversen, Germany, was the town that forgot about Christmas — but now the town annually has one of the most joyful Christmas celebrations in all the world!

In the 1950s Eversen was a very poor town. All the young families had left and only a handful of older couples remained in the town.

And to make matters worse, none of the remaining people had any children. For a few years the people of the town had small celebrations, but as time went on and the people grew older and poorer, Christmas became less and less important.

Eventually Christmas in Eversen became just another day in the long hard German winter.

But that all changed the day a bus from a nearby orphanage broke down on the outskirts of town.

It was Christmas Day 1962 and it was quite clear the little orphans would not make it 25 miles to the next town — where a large party was planned for them.

The old folks of Eversen sprang to life and organized a party in their town hall for the children.

And the party organizers from the next town climbed in their cars and brought all their toys, food and decorations to Eversen.

Never had a town known so much joy. The Christmas spirit that had been dead in Eversen for so long now was alive again.

The party was such a success that everyone decided to have it in Eversen every year. The celebration grew to be one of the biggest in the whole world.

And the tradition lives today, when people travel from miles around to celebrate the holidays in Eversen, the town that once forgot Christmas.
